After Dinner.

"Haven't I a right to be asucy, if I please?" a ked a young lady of an old bachelor. "Ye, if you please, but not if you displease," was the answer.

It's rather remarkable that while several thousand feet are required to make one food, a single foot, properly applied, is often sufficient to make one civil.

All bachelors are not entirely lost to the refin ment of sentiment, for the following toust was lately given by one of them at a public dinner: The ladies, sweetbriars in the garden of life.

An old clergyman, spying a boy loreep ing through a fence, exclaimed: What! crawling through a fence? Pigs do that."
"Yes retorted the boy, "and old hogs go along the street."

A St. Louis paper had a two column ac votional feelings, in a short speech in church, said: "I shall never cesse to love and revere the name of my dear Savior, nor can I ever forget how His name looks in the Bible, as it is there spelled J.e.s.s.o.u.s."

A shoemaker with a literary turn of mind has the following poetical gem attached to his shop front—
'Here lives a man who never refuses
To mend all sorts of boots and shoeses."
